(37cm.) high (worn, pads recovered with kid, face seams restitched, hole to tip of nose and some small moth holes to uniform) - Bruiny, was purchased from Bermondsey Antique Market in the 1970s, by one of the first British collectors of teddy bears, she was given the bears handwritten provenance on a postcard - 'BRUINY (pronounced Broony) - Bruiny arrived at Christmas 1908 in Birmingham, He was transferred in 1915 to the border of Salisbury Plain and joined the Army. Using some rather questionable manoeuvres he was rapidly promoted to General. He had a Motor Bike & Sidecar with wheels made out of Golden Syrup tin lids. He has his driving licence, signed by my Father, in his right hand pocket. My cousin Edward, stationed at Bulford, made his sword out of a piece of yew and Cousin Cecile made his stylish baggy trousers. The rest of his outfit was made by myself with very limited resources. There was no cloth to turn in which (sic), although I was only eleven, I knew should have been done. He retired from the Active List in 1923 and has lived in happy retirement ever since. He enjoys occasional Reunions with his Contemporaries.' - sadly at the time, no more names were noted, so tracking his original owner will be a tricky task, although the driving license is signed, probably by Bulright or Bullwright, amazingly he still retains this driving license, sword and pistol.

She was born in 1875, the youngest daughter in a respected family in Belfast. Her father (John Haslett) along with her uncle (Sir James Haslett) founded a wholesale grocery business in Belfast ("J & J Haslett Limited"). Sir James Haslett went on to become Lord Mayor of Belfast in 1887. HMS Neslon was launched on 1814, but was laid up until 1854, then converted into a screw ship in the 1860s, before being given the Victoria, Australia as a training ship in the 1868. It seems unlikely that the doll was named after this actual slightly failed HMS Nelson, but probably after the man himself as a seafaring hero. It is believe that Winnie's nanny made the uniform.
